The scientific journal on the Western Indian Ocean contains Open Access papers. That means that every published paper –after reviewing and acceptation by the editorial board– will be on-line for anyone and for free. This initiative, which fills a gap in the diffusion of the knowledge about natural sciences, will succeed only if the naturalists of this area submit papers for publication.

Attempted contributions are of three kinds: 1. Research paper : paper which shows original results through title, abstracts (French and English), key words, introduction and material, methods and results, discussion and conclusion, references. 2. Review paper : paper which reviews a very particular subject. The form of this kind is free but the paper is attempted to be exhaustive. It is also attempted to bring a new regard on the subject or to give a clear regard on a subject whom information is difficult to access (large or ancient bibliography). 3. Observation note : note about a conspicuous observation about one taxon such as the first citation or the rediscovery or a particular behaviour. Such paper should not exceed two pages.

Papers should be submitted in French or in English.
